About Ebony Robinson

Ebony Robinson is a sales and relationship expert and the Director of Business Development and Community Relations at ConstructReach. As a strategically sound and results-oriented sales professional, specializing in commercial services, team leadership and development, brand management, sales, and marketing, Ebony has developed new sales initiatives and product launches resulting in over 50 million in sales for a variety of companies.

Within her current role at ConstructReach alongside her husband, Paul Robinson, they lead a workforce development consultancy that addresses the underrepresentation of minorities in the construction, manufacturing, and engineering industries—as well as the corporations engaging these industries. She also spearheads a national initiative that has intentionally engaged the next generation of diverse talent by exposing them to construction career pathways while bridging the gaps between industry and education.

She is passionate about leading with a servant's heart, and being intentional with the teams you lead, and operates from a foundation of transformation versus transaction.

Her passion for people ignites organic connectivity to bring communities together all around the country. When she isn't working, she enjoys spending time with her family, and friends and traveling the world.

Keynote Topics

Ebony works with expanding companies and general contracting firms across the U.S. to inspire and educate leaders toward creating more inclusive workplaces.
